Wonder About the Flashing Yellow Turn Signal?

The Town office recently received an inquiry about the traffic signal at US 158 and The Woods Road. Apparently the citizen had to wait a couple of cycles to make the left turn from US 158 onto The Woods Road. As a result of the inquiry, the Town officials asked NCDOT to explain the operation of the signal.

According to Jason Davidson, Deputy Division Traffic Engineer for NCDOT, when a vehicle pulls into the left turn lane the signal computer recognizes the vehicle is present. The flashing yellow arrow would be visible when a vehicle first pulls into the left turn lane. If the vehicle cannot turn left on the flashing yellow arrow, the signal computer will bring up a left turn green arrow after the main street and side streets are given a green ball.

If a vehicle happens to move beyond the stop bar in the left turn lane, the signal computer thinks that the vehicle has made the left turn when it has not. In this case, the vehicles may be waiting for a green arrow until another vehicle moves in behind the vehicle that is beyond the stop bar. When getting into the left turn lane, be sure that you are behind the stop bar.

NCDOT says that by having the flashing yellow turn signal, it moves more traffic on US 158 and the side streets because the green arrow is not displayed for each signal cycle and therefore gives more time to US 158 and the side streets.

If you believe that a traffic signal is not working the way it should or have further questions about their operation, you can contact Town Hall for more information.
